

ABSTRACT

A divider including generally flat body portion and a tab coupled to and slidable along an outer edge of said body portion. The tab is manually slidable along the outer edge such that a user can slide the tab to a desired location and release the tab whereupon the tab interacts with the body portion such that the tab is generally locked in place relative to the body portion without requiring any further manual manipulation.